CANADIAN BASKETBALLERS DOMINATE STARTING LINE-UP AT LOYOLA

Looking at the starting line-ups for tonight's basketball game, at Loyola in which the Warriors opposed the Quebec All-Stars at 8:30 p.m., one would think Doug Daigneault's Canadian development program has suddenly, arrived overnight. Five Canadians and all Loyola students will be starting; Trevor Briggs at Center, at Forwards Peter Dunn and Dave Osborne at the guard spots Pete Mullins and Wayne Hussey. Unfortunately for the college team Briggs, Ryan and Hussey will not be wearing Loyola colors. The trio are evening division students at Loyola, ineligible to play in intercollegiate competition this year, and will be lining-up with the Quebec All-Stars.

As for Mullins and Osborne they will be counted on by Loyola for extra heavy duty. The Warriors' bench strength was depleted this week with injuries to Jerry Walsh and Dwayne Clark. Clark is slated for an operation and Walsh may not dress.

This will be the final tune-up game for the All-Stars. With a good showing they could take advantage of Loyola's misfortunes and become the first Quebec team in recent years to defeat the Warriors.

A preliminary game will be played at 6:30 p.m. with the Quebec Women's All-Stars featured against Ottawa women's team.

Tonight's All-Star Game marks the third special basketball event Loyola has conducted this year to promote the sport in the Province. Loyola hosted the Yugoslavia National Team in October and in December the Centennial Tournament.

All profits from the games tonight will be donated by the college to the Quebec teams to help finance their trip to the Canadian Winter Games in Saskatoon.
